NCSBN Nursing Regulation Department

Introducing NCSBN's International Center for Regulatory Scholarship. The ICRS is an interactive, two-year program offering regulators the opportunity to gain advanced knowledge, enhance their leadership skills, and build a network of colleagues from around the world. The program consists of both online and in-person courses that provide credit towards the ICRS Certificate as well as continuing education credit.

Enrolled students begin with a formal assessment and receive recommendations as to the courses that would best suit their learning needs. Students may also select electives that match their interests. Instructors are experts in their field and understand the unique needs of regulators. Courses are structured into three pathways of learning, regulation and governance, public policy and legislation, and research.

Students are expected to actively participate and gain the most from their experience. The final step in the certificate program is the ICRS Leadership Institute that will bring participants together to learn from authorities known worldwide for their accomplishments and leadership. The program is open to NCSBN members, exam user members, and associate members.

Enroll and be a part of this exciting new program. Visit icrsncsbn.org today to learn more.
